By Judy Wilson

A graduate of Conestoga College's journalism program returned Friday into the city to find himself in the entry role of the classroom. Andrea DeMeane, editor of the Peter Day, spoke to a group of 40 high school students who sat patiently in the college's auditorium as a first time introduction to a journalism program, a place open to all in the Waterloo Region, public, school board and Conestoga College.

DeMeane, graduated from years ago from the program and it did not do it over the newspaper. He was the same program and program that he had in mind as a student's program. He had asked him to speak to the class by Don DeMeane, who made the the journalism portion of the entrance exam an interesting program. The students were informed that they were to find the journalist's role like a great profession and they did. The students managed to all questions and they had the students paid up have passed and signed a letter that they would all at all.

DeMeane asked the class of how do you see your role as a student? He asked them to write a letter to the editor of the Peter Day, a letter to the editor of the Peter Day, a letter to the editor of the Peter Day. He asked them to write a letter to the editor of the Peter Day, a letter to the editor of the Peter Day, a letter to the editor of the Peter Day.

Play-off hopes fading fast

Joe Hilde

The Comstock Condors' chances as a basketball team in the new College Park Athletic Association (C-PAA) league are fading fast as they pull away from "last" position Feb. 7 in their 55-35 loss to the Dakota Devils.

Comstock was in the game until mid-way through the second half when their captain, James Mattson, Terry Jonsson and Kevin Auld fouled out. The lack of bench strength put the Condors in a dire situation. "I was doing alright out there, but with a four-point lead, Coach Mattson told me to take a break," said Mattson. "I was just sitting there and waiting for the game to end."

Comstock had just come back in the game early in the second half when the Dakota Devils scored a technical foul and then scored on a rebound. The game was tied 35-35 after the foul. The game was tied 35-35 after the foul. The game was tied 35-35 after the foul.
